

The Caldwell Farm property has been in the family for 150 years and was recognized in 2017 at the state fair by the Century and Sesquicentennial Farm Program. Robert Caldwell's father-in-law purchased the land in 1887, and it passed on to Robert in 1889 when he married.

The barn quilt is mounted on the grainery which was built in the 1920's by John R. Caldwell. Scottish building materials were used, as John was road commissioner and the lumber came when roads were updated.

The quilt pattern is called the Dutch Rose quilt block. It was chosen for the five colors: one color for each generation of Caldwells.
