Chris and Sue Jensen and their children are the sixth and seventh generations to live on their century farm. The first generation, the John and Marion (Shanks) Towers family, arrived in Caledonia Township in 1850 from Scotland, purchasing the farm in 1867. The farm has been passed on from generation to generation over the years, and was named “Heritage Hills Farm” after it was declared a century farm. Over the years, the types of animals on the farm have changed, from cattle to pigs to chickens and horses. The farm is now home to a herd of Scottish Highland cattle, which provides a nice link to the family ancestry.
