This is a century-old barn that is very unique as two barns were put together making it 110’ long and 36’ wide with a gable roof and field stone foundation. It was used for beef cattle and hogs. A 60’ wide lean-to was added to the barn with automatic feeder and shelter for the animals. To preserve the barn, a steel roof and siding have been installed. Not having animals anymore, it has become a machine shed.

The farm was purchased by John Link’s father, Leo, in 1946.

The barn quilt was a gift to the Link family from Eugene and Lorraine Hahn and was painted by Eugene.
