

The quilt pattern, “Farmer’s Daughter,” was chosen because the farm was passed down through the years to daughters. The current owners, Steve and Amy Paskey have three daughters. The quilt uses the girls’ favorite colors.

The farm was originally owned by Steve’s great grandparents.

The dairy barn was converted into a woodworking shop after the cows were sold in 2007.