Intellectual Freedom and Right To Read Issues

Shawn Brommer and Tracie Miller are looking into intellectual freedom services to help member libraries face potential challenges to materials. They are looking at library collection development and reconsideration policies, creating informational packets, developing a system survey, and will be gathering national reports about challenges to materials in school and other libraries. Contact Shawn if your library is faced with a challenge or if you have anything to contribute on this topic.

IDEA Project - Libraries Talk about Race

Jean Anderson and Mark Jochem are working with other consultant staff Sherry Machones (Northern Waters Library Service), Leah Lanby (IFLS), Shauna Koszegi (Southwest Wisconsin Library System), Cole Zrostlik (Winding Rivers Library System) and The People Company (a DEI consulting firm) to provide LSTA-funded statewide training opportunities. This project will include webinars, large group discussions, and independent study opportunities. Expect a rollout of the Libraries Talk about Race series in the first-half of 2022.

Social Work Internship Cohort

Shawn Brommer and Mark Jochem are working in partnership with undergraduate programs of social work from UW-Stevens Point and UW-Madison and a 14-member library cohort to host social work student interns in libraries. This is a continuation of an increased focus on social services in library settings. The interns could potentially provide social work services directly to patrons, assist with library projects, and provide continuing education to the cohort and the whole system. It is likely the student interns will be placed in the participating libraries Fall 2022.

Local History Digitization Projects

Twenty-three SCLS member libraries have collections in Recollection Wisconsin and the Digital Public Library of America. The libraries' online collections include 6,885 items of historical or cultural significance and new items are being continually added. The items have been viewed 942,408 times through the end of 2021.

New Building

Plans are proceeding for SCLS to purchase 4.12 acres of land on Fen Oak Drive in Madison to build its new headquarters. The new building will combine both administration and delivery services.

- The intent is to save money by building.
 - SCLS will own one combined building versus leasing two buildings.
 - While leasing, the rent is increasing every year.
 - SCLS pays taxes through the rent. When SCLS owns the building, it will not pay taxes.
 - Owning the building will provide a fiscal asset.

- The design will be flexible for all work experiences.
 - The building will be designed to meet the specific needs of Delivery.
 - It will house a data center, have office spaces for staff, and provide meeting rooms for staff and member meetings.

- New building timeline:
 - Purchase land by February 1, 2022
 - Break ground in June 2022
 - Move in June 2023

- Any Columbia County Directors that can offer mentorship through the Annual Report to the Wyocena Library Board President would be appreciated.
