He said the meetings throughout the State were done – he could not speak about specifics but did say that the themes would be provided later in the year. He said the WCA was looking at filling their open positions for Legislative Aides. He talked about the fiscal problem of the State, he said the bond rating for Wisconsin is poor and the structural deficit makes the State budget difficult to manage.

Program
Jeff Hoffman – Dodge County UW-Extension Community Development Educator presented Conflict and Negotiation II.
This was the second month that the topic centered on conflict. Hoffman provided a review of the February ICC material – including a discussion on individual conflict styles, the Model for Improvement, and there was open discussion about where conflict exists for those present. Hoffman then went on to explain the Seven Elements of Negotiation. The elements include Relationships, Communication, Interests, Options, Criteria, Alternatives, and Agreement. Hoffman provided additional information about the element of interests and the importance of knowing your BATNA (Best Alternative
To a Negotiated Agreement) He commented that the search for interests is the fundamental difference between integrative and positional decision-making. He went on to explain what a BATNA is and how one’s BATNA must be understood prior to going into a negotiation. Hoffman provided exercises designed to help the group better understand the concepts.
